

Recommended Reading

Recommended Reading for Parents

Before you start educating your children, you'll need to spend some time educating yourself about homeschooling. No, you don't have to read all of these books before getting started, but try to read at least three or four of them. Different authors promote entirely different approaches, so it is very helpful to see the range of possibilities that exist before deciding which way is best for your family.

These are a few of the books, magazines, and publications recommended. Many books about homeschooling can be found in the Public Library system or online. Some are listed under "domestic education" in the subject catalog (rather than "homeschooling").

And What About College?, by Cafi Cohen

For the Children's Sake, by Susan Schaeffer Macaulay

Homeschooling for Excellence, by David and Micki Colfax. These are the folks who have been on national television because their homeschooled sons were admitted to Harvard.

Homeschooling Book of Answers, by Linda Dobson

Teach Your Own, by John Holt (or any of Holt's books on education)

The Well Trained Mind by Wise and Wise Bauer

The Ultimate Guide to Homeschooling, Debra Bell

The First Year of Homeschooling

Homeschooling: The Right Choice

Educating the Whole- Hearted Child

Charlotte Mason Companion: The Complete Guide to Getting Started Homeschooling

What Your ...Grader Needs to Know

You Can Teach Your Child Successfully

Biblical Home Education: Building Your Homeschool on the Foundation of God's Word

Magazines:

The Old Schoolhouse

Homeschooling Today

Homeschool Enrichment

